Boston Port Collectorship Refused by Chamber of Commerce Man While President Sends Nomination to Senate

BUSINESS THE REASON

Selection Indorsed by Senators Lodge and Weeks and Members of the Massachusetts Delegation in the House

WASHINGTON - Nomination of Joseph Russell of Boston to be collector of the port of Boston to succeed Edwin U. Curtis, who resigned April 26, was sent to the Senate today by President

Senators Lodge and Weeks were called into consultation on the matter by the President and both expressed their hearty approval of the selection of Mr. Russell. The entire Massachusetts delegation in Congress appears to be pleased with the Joseph B. Russell, selected as collector of the port of Boston, according to despatches from Washington, wired President Wilson today that he would be unable to accept the position owing to business reasons.

The former president of the Chamber of Commerce expressed his appreciation the government defeat at Newmarket of the honor and wished that he were in a position to assume the important post, but said that the same conditions obtained now as did before when he pre viously declined to let his name be used.

Mr. Russell, in a statement issued NO COMPETITION PHONE RECORDS today, says: "The reports in the papers are all a very great surprise to me. No one has spoken to me in regard to the collectorship since the withdrawal some time ago of my name for the position. and I assumed that my connection with it had ceased.

"I deeply appreciate the honor, and wish I could accept the position, but it is impossible, both on account of my health and my business engagements and I have so telegraphed the President. "I am very grateful for his recognition and friendship, and trust that in some more humble and less arduous way I may be of service to him and his administration.'

Mr. Russell has been in business in Boston since 1869. He is a vice-president for the Real Estate Exchange and auction board and member of the board of ADELAIDE. S. Aus .- The progress and development of South Australia is Domoney; parliamentary committee, L. manifested in a variety of directions. One of these is the rapid expansion of the business of the post office and telephone departments. Some interesting particulars in regard to the latter are contained in the annual report for 1912.

It shows that the 12 months had eclipsed in record all previous telephone development in the state. The number of new subscribers connected with the central station was 561, and 94 subscribers discontinued their services, leaving an actual increase for the year of 467. In the country the development has been as equally marked, and a number of new public telephones have been opened in various centers. The most significant feature in the expansion was in trunk line working, 24 new country stations having been brought into communication with central, making a total of 143.

The report proceeds: "In 1883 only two exchanges were in existence in the state, with a total of 154 subscribers. In 1911 there were 82 exchanges, carrying 5915 subscribers. In 1912, 93 exchanges served 6834 subscribers."

On the occasion in question King Alfonso was brought into definite con tact with the commercial world by his interview with the president of the committee for the improvement of commerial relations between France and Spain and a number of other well-known commercial men. The meeting afforded an opportunity of explaining to his majesty personally many points relating to trade between the two countries in such a manner as to arouse his active interest. and the wish was expressed that trade relations might in future be regulated by a commercial treaty. It would seem somewhat of an anomaly that two such near neighbors as France and Spain cannot trade together on more easy terms. The present business between the two countries is much confined by a very high protective tarif., with the result that last year French exports to Spain amounted to only f.137, 000,000 and Spanish exports to France to only f.230,000,000. This, having regard to the extraordinary richness of both countries, is infinitesimal.

Groove Well to Follow

This commercial side of things seems, at first sight, to be of secondary importance in the general question of an entente, but it is believed by many that it is on this line, when fully developed. that the most far-reaching commercial prosperity for both countries is possible.

A leading article in the Temps says that no one could have been more gracious than was his majesty during his visit to Paris. To every one who had the honor of meeting him he knew so well how to say "le mot juste," so much more valuable than all banal compliments, for it is evidence of true discernment of men and things. Essentially simple and natural, King Alfonso shows that he is in close touch with current events, curious to see and observe and open to impressions and new ideas. ## THE HOMELESS MAN PROBLEM

By Arthur James Todd, Ph.D., Department of Sociology, University of Illinois

OMELESS MEN" is the social worker's term to designate those of the homeless class living in cheap lodging houses in congested parts of large cities. Not that all these men are really homeless, for some are familydeserters, some the victims of robbery, others runaway boys. Neither | weights that the Legislature this year clude the weight of the wrappers and are they all "unemployed" nor "tramps." Tramps are homeless, but every home- adopted the amendment to the statute, the rope in the charge is now limited, it less man is by no means a tramp.

He may be an able-bodied workman without a family, a sufferer stranded his way to some recoperative resort, or an irresponsible being "passed along." I should add a class closely allied to these, namely, the unmarried immigrant in large cities. These so-caled "birds of passage" among the Bulgars, Greeks, and other nationalities of the new immigrants constitute a moral as well economic and sanitary problem on account of their homelessness and transiency: less than 5 per cent of recent immigration from these races are women. Those that do not crowd into boarding houses conducted by women of their own the same Legislature is being asked to sistence on net weights, it is not clear nationality gather into "stag boarding houses," which are "invariably dirty, filthy, qualify its act by an amendment pro- that a trade custom in variance with cial exemption. If it were necessary in crowded, and filled with vermin,"

The native homeless man is a lodging house problem. Most applications for from this class come to charity offices in cheap lodging house districts. The ance with established trade customs." product by nominal pounds is precisely put the granting of the exemptions in the majority of these are mentally or physically handicapped. The able-bodied temporarily "down and out" frequent the municipal lodging houses.

The causes of homelessness include most of the general causes of distress, and some peculiar to itself. The tendency to urban concentration in modern industry, rapid changes in industrial technique, seasonal trades, "speeding up," industrial accident, disease, lack of general or vocational education, demand for cheap immigrant labor, are responsible. Leaving home to look for work frequently degenerates into homelessness and desertion. Many of these men are widowers who date their vagrant careers from the breakup of their homes by ne one's passing away. With boys it is usually curiosity or wanderlust that starts them on their peregrinations. Most of them come from fairly good homes, the majority are utterly untrained.

Solutions of the homeless man problem are as various as the class is broad. First of all, eliminate tramps and professional beggars and the worst part of change gives the amendment a class by an understanding of the terms by the when the need is that the customs of the lodging house population will vanish. Many of these houses will disappear for lack of trade. The others may be made decent by raising standards of cleanliness and sanitation. The same standards should be applied to immigrant stag boarding houses. Municipal lodging houses might set the pace for care of the transient. And places like the Mills hotels or General Booth's Metropoles could easily be developed to house the self-respecting homeless workman with

The chronic incompetents should no longer be relegated to these filthy lodging houses, but cared for in appropriate institutions. For those of advanced years and there are a good many of them-pensions are proposed. But I believe homes for aged men (of which we have only an insignificant number now) would provide more humanely and more rationally for these veterans of the industrial army. Of course, pensions might be applied to caring for them in such homes.

Free public labor bureaus working with organized charities and municipal lodging houses might take care of the unemployment side of the problem. But by no means limited to Morocco, and the homeless man needs more than a job. If he is a family-deserter he ought the likelihood of their realization has to be reinstated in his family. But so far, it must be confessed, this phase of become more evident as the result of rehabilitating the homeless man has met with little success. Domestic wounds are moral wounds and do not lend themselves easily to medicine or law. The It is recognized in Spain that diplo- deserter is ashamed to face his former relatives and has acquired the habit of vagrant independence. His children frequently object to having him back or we forms, viz.. the legitimate desire to to caring for him. The runaway youth is usually more amenable to rejoining participate, as was stated recently in his family. For that reason the homeless man who is a minor needs infinitely

Old English in Architecture, It Nestles at the Water's Edge of Pond, Balanced in the View by Storage House Nearby

MUNICIPAL ADDITION

Overlooking Jamaica pond, the city's new $19,000 boathouse is now nearly completed. Old English in architecture, it looks more like a private than a publie building. In fact it has much the appearance of an attractive dwelling ouse nestled down at the water's edge. Stone steps lead down to the water and a rait is moored in front for the hoats to come alongside. There is a little concrete paved court, to one side of which stands the boathouse itself and to the other a storehouse. The two buildings balance perfectly and from across the pond look as if they were all part of one structure.

The boathouse is two stories in height. The lower part is of brick, while the upper is of plaster with slabs of wood running up vertically. The roof has a sharp angle.

This, added to the other municipal buildings in the district, makes Jamaica one of the most developed sections in the city from a recreation standpoint. Curtis hall, which was recently rebuilt at a cost of $140,000, now affords splen-

On wood; on steel

For 36 years we have used wood-oak. or mahogany - in manufacturing office equipment that bears our name-plate. We still use wood. We shall continue to use it. But we also use steel. For seven years we have operated our own steel factory. It is at Ilion, N. Y.

Steel is clean. It never wears out. In fire-resisting qualities it is superior to wood. And-if one knows how-it is possible to duplicate, in steel, all those refinements that characterize Library Bureau's output in wood.

That is precisely what Library Bureau is doing. Its steel furniture is beautiful—BEAUTIFUL. The construction is honest. The material is RIGHT. On steel furniture, as on wood, the Library Bureau name-plate is your guarantee. Look for it.

Our stock of steel office equipment includes filing cabinets, both vertical and horizontal, for cards and papers of all sizes; tray cases for standard-size cards; and plate steel safes.

We make to order trucks, vault fittings. bank fittings, etc.

May we send you "Steel Card and Filing Cabinets?" It is a veritable eye-opener to the man who wants to know about steel furniture. 40 pages, illustrated.

> It might seem difficult to ship any thing so perishable as a cake decorated with flowers of icing on a journey of many thousands of miles across the seas, but these cakes almost invariably reach their destination without a blemish to their first delicate beauty. This is because of the skill with which they are packed.

First the cake is wrapped in oil paper to exclude the air, after which it is glued with icing to the sides and bottom of a white pasteboard box made especially to fit it. Next comes a tin box made exactly the right size, in which it is soldered. ## The Clean Newspaper's Func tion as a Safeguard Become a Strong Factor in Intern tional Relations

At times when delicate international situations are being reviewed by the representatives of great nations determining present and future policies of the respective governments, the responsibility which rests with the newspapers in justly interpreting public opinion is indeed great.

Such a great trust rests upon the shoulders of those who publish a daily paper that high minded people everywhere deplore the note of alarm sounded by any representative of the press more particularly at such a time.

The daily newspaper is the one source of information for the vast majority of people and for any paper to do anything but clearly inform its readers on the issues involved and judiciously to give its candid, unfettered opinion constitutes the betrayal of one of the greatest trusts which can be invested in a body of men.

The Monitor's attitude as expressed in news and editorials will be found fair and open minded at all times and on every question. #### WILLING PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON-Senate sub-committees of the finance committee began long sessions today in the hope of getting through the tariff bill in a week, though several of the members see little chance of completing the work inside of 10 days.

After two conferences Wednesday between Senator Simmons, chairman of the finance committee, and Secretary Bryan and John Basset Moore, counselor of the state department, and Senators Williams and Shively of the finance committee and Representative Peters of Massachusetts, who had charge of the administrative section of the tariff bill for the House ways and means committee, it was made known that Congress in all probability will yield to the protests of foreign nations against the provision in the Underwood tariff bill granting a 5 per cent tariff discount on imports in American owned or controlled vessels.

That the provision can be eliminated from the bill without harm and that Congress has no desire to insist upon ANISTEE, Mich. - Upon the which now bears the marks of civilized ments and beautifying of lawns is seen, foreign nations or interfere with treaty

Few trips are of more immediate interest, on the eve of the completion of the Panama canal, than is that leisurely sca vovage from Panama to San Francisco, which affords so many glimpses of picturesque Central America and Mexico. The Monitor is to present to its readers a timely series of specially prepared articles, with a number of excellent views of that stretch of the Pacifie coast, by the American traveler and camera artist, George R. Opinion here is rather divided on the subject of the effect of President-elect Montes' visit and the tangibility of his proposition. General Montes' return to the presidency have introduced an PRESIDENCY LINE entirely new problem into South American politics and economy. It was natural that Bolivia's neighbors with all of whom she has either border questions or other more or less acute controversies should have watched with growing apprehension the PERNAMBUCO, Brazil—It is reported large purchases of arms and ammunition made by General Montes here from the capital that former Presiduring his stay in France while German instructors were endeavoring dent Nilo Pecanha is about to leave the to make the Bolivian militia over into something like another Chilean Conservative party and go over to the

The inference from the start was that as soon as seated in the presidential chair, General Montes would at once proceed to give his It is also gathered from information country the needed elbow room in the direction of both the Pacific reaching this place from Rio de Janeiro. and the Atlantic. To secure a port on the Pacific from either Chile or that the proposed candidacy of Dr. Lauro Peru, recovering a position they had held before the war, though not in exactly the same latitude, was of course known to be the legitimate deputies. The name of Sr. Epitacio aspiration of the Bolivians, especially in view of the early completion Pessoa, who is sailing on a trip to Europe, of the Panama canal, but not until recently had it seriously occurred is also prominently mentioned of late to either Chileans or Peruvians that their neighbors might actually a presidential possibility. force the issue. That such was not altogether out of the question became clear when Bolivia suddenly took steps to assert her right to a better outlet toward the Atlantic than her two ports on the remote upper course of the Paraguay afford her and, reviving her claims to the Paraguayan Chaco, began massing troops as though determined to occupy the right bank of that river down to where a convenient port for large ocean-going steamers might be found, if necessary, on the very edge of Argentine territory.

But having shown his mailed fist, by deputy at least, General Montes drops the negative, aggressive manner, and suddenly comes forward with positive and constructive propositions. They may not be new, but they are unquestionably timely, and, as they have the advantage of being uttered by a man who has shown his determination to lead his nation out of geographical isolation they appear to be received with respectful attention. It will be of the greatest interest, from the point of view of world traffic, to learn further particulars as to the customs union proposed by General Montes, since the breadth of his outlook impresses the Peruvians as continental rather than national, as taking in the solidarity of all South America rather than limiting itself to the three countries, Chile, Peru

It is possible that President-elect Montes' reference to a customs union, binding Colombia, Venezuela and Ecuador, is purely casual and academic, but it is hardly probable. That there is now a movement on foot to reconstitute the former tri-partite republic "la gran Colombia," comprising Colombia, Venezuela and Ecuador, is persistently rumored in the Caribbean and on the Pacific coast; and, as the scheme is said to have been evolved in Europe by the former Presidents of Colombia and Venezuela, Generals Reyes and Castrothe first being now engaged in a South American solidarity propaganda tour-it may be inferred that General Montes during his prolonged stay in Paris-Mecca of Latin-American diplomats, milionaires and former Presidents-had ample opportunity to post himself, compare notes and exchange ideas on the subject.

No Monopoly, Says Judge Gary of U.S. Steel

Chairman of Corporation's Directorate in Government Dissolution Suit, Declares Concern Was Completely Independent

STORY OF THE MERGER

NEW YORK-Judge Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation board, who conducted many of the negotiations which led to its organization while testifying as a witness for the defense in the suit to dissolve the corporation under the Sherman antitrust law, declared on Wednesday that neither he, the late J. P. Morgan nor anbody else concerned had ever discussed the question of obtaining a monopoly in the steel industry or of suppressing competition.

The witness told of the circumstances which led to the formation of the cor poration. He explained that the purpose that actuated its organizers was to obtain a "rounded-out, self-contained proposition, complete in every phase of manufacture from the mining of ore to the production of diversified finished products in the mills, with the ability to reduce costs to the most economical basis and particularly to develop an export trade.

"Our effort," he said, "has been to extend trade and to foster competition and we have done that."

Judge Gary denied that the Steel corporation had been overcapitalized, as charged by the government. The properties acquired "were all worth the price that we paid for them," he asserted while the ore properties of the Lake Superior Consolidated Iron Mines, John D. Rockefeller's concern, were got, "it has since been proved, at a very low

He denied that the Federal Steel Company, around which the corporation was formed, was a monopoly, as alleged by the government, and said that when the Federal and some of the other steel companies, now subsidiaries of the corpora tion, were investigated by the industrial commission of Congress in 1899 no complaint was entered against them by the department of justice or any other TRADE BOOM IN department of justice or any other branch of the government. The organization of the corporation was hastened, Judge Gary said, by the desire of the Federal Steel Company, a J. P. Morgan concern, to perfect a "rounded-out" organization. This opportunity came when Andrew Cargenie of fered to sell the Carnegie Steel Company.

The Federal had refused previously several proffers of the Carnegie Steel Company and had tried to raise $40,000,-000 to build new plants of its own. This attempt was abandoned, he said, when Charles M. Schwab outlined to Mr. Morgan the advantages of acquiring a then existing property. Mr. Morgan was "impressed" and called in the directors of the Federal Steel Company.

Increase Your Poultry

The poultry stock and supplies you sell advertised in the Monitor will come to the attention of poultry raisers and fanciers throughout Boston. 56% of Greater Boston's population live in its suburbs. These people are householders who live far enough out of the city proper to have a garden and keep hens.

Use a home paper to reach these people. The Monitor is read in good homes-not only throughout Greater Boston but all over the country. It has a national circulation as extensive as the magazine. The Classified Poultry Section offers an excellent opportunity to get the desired results at a low rate. Give us the facts and an idea of the price you wish to pay and we will gladly prepare your advertisements. The cost of this advertising, which appears on Thursday of each week, will be, per inch: DISPLAY

Your order should reach us as soon as possible. No advertisement taken for less than three lines solid or seven lines

WASHINGTON-The U. S. weather b

WASHINGTON—The U. S. weather bureau predicts weather today as follows for New England: Fair Tonight and Friday, except showers tonight in Maine; moderate northwesterly winds.

The eastern depression overspreads the Atlantic slope from the marifilme provinces to Georgia, with the lowest barometer 23.44 at Eastport. The western low forms a trough from Ontario southwesterly to Mexico. Pressure is high over the north Pacific slope and near the average in the lake regions and thence south to the Gulf of Mexico. There is much unsettled weather over the rest of the country, generally without rain excepting some showers in the Northeast. The temperature changes are unimportant.

The Rural Problem

The APPEAL of the chancellor of the exchequer in the House of Commons recently to men of all parties to set aside party differences, and join together in a united effort to solve the rural problem, has scarcely met with the reception it deserved. "Speak generally on the virtues of economy in the House of Commons," Bagehot wrote many years ago, "and you will be cheered to the echo. Propose a single measure of economy and you will be heard in silence." The statement is true in regard to the advocacy of many other virtues besides economy. The sweeping away of party difference is approved in theory, but in practise its reception depends very much on "times and seasons." Nevertheless the fact that so vigorous a party politician as Mr. Lloyd-George should have proposed a non-party consideration of such a century-old party question as the agricultural question, is not without significance, and not without encouragement.

The British House of Commons is nothing if not generous, and although it is all too quick to recall itself to party lines, and, in many other respects, is still very much what it was when Bagehot wrote of it fifty years ago, yet its occasional excursions into the land of a more single purpose and wider view, seem to grow more frequent, and its sojourns there more prolonged. The cheers which punctuated that part of the chancellor's speech in which he pleaded for the non-partizan point of view, and for real cooperation between the parties, expressed an approval real enough and deep enough, and it cannot be doubted that they will find an echo throughout the country.

The condition of the agricultural laborer in England, both as regards housing and wages, has for nearly a hundred years been one of the blots on the social system of the country, and the problem of problems to a long line of politicians. When Mr. Lloyd-George said in the House that in regard to one aspect of it he was "puzzled," he indicated the mental condition of many in regard to the question. The very fact that it lies at the root of every other problem, that all wealth is ultimately labor, and that the vast bulk of the labor of the world is ultimately dependent on land, engenders in the thought of the would-be reformer the fear that any alteration in the foundation may involve the superstructure in something like ruin. There is, however, little to be said for this view as an excuse for maction. The solution of most great problems is generally found to be simple enough, and it cannot be doubted that the solution of this one lies at hand. That it will be found more readily along the lines of cooperation than amidst the pother of party strife goes without saying.

Government as a Shopkeeper

It is one of the functions of the war department to maintain a commissariat. This branch of the army service alone issues 30,000,000 rations a year, and the United States is not a military country. For an army of 100,000 men each day's rations require fifty tons of meat, fifty tons of bread, fifty tons of potatoes and forty tons of other food. Some idea of what it means to provision the navy may be obtained from the fact that 9000 pounds of dried eggs and 26,000 pounds of dehydroted vegetables were part of the stores for the last United States battle-ship fleet to make the rounds of the world. The government must maintain supply stores of many other kinds, of course, and these consist of practically everything used in the army posts and navy yards and by the soldiers and sailors, from pins, needles and thread to camp and dreadnought outfits. The commissary departments of the army and navy are of the very first importance, and the greatest care and skill are employed in their conduct. But, as may easily be seen, they are provided for a strictly public service.

A very different problem, although along somewhat the same line, presented itself in Panama when the government of the United States took over the privately managed French Panama canal plant, with its rights and good will. An army had to be placed on the isthmus, an industrial rather than a military army, in all respects a very peculiar army, and it had to be housed, clothed and fed for approximately ten years. It could not live from the country. It could not be supplied by any-existing agencies. The government did not care to take the risk of turning over its subsistence to contractors. The government, therefore, was literally forced into paternalism. It was compelled to become a shopkeeper, and on a tremendous scale. Almost every visitor returning from the Canal Zone in the last five years has been full of praise for the system of shopkeeping carried on by the government. Our recent correspondence from Culebra goes into the matter fully and interestingly, and presents such an attractive picture of government ownership and operation in merchandising as to cause one to regret that the system must cease with the completion of the waterway.

Whether through the main store or through any of its score of branches, the impression given by the service is that it borders very closely upon perfection. Profit, beyond what is absolutely necessary to the efficient conduct of the business, is eliminated. There are no middlemen. All supplies, eatables, wearables or usables of any description, are of good grade. Economies are practised in the interest of seller and buyer alike. Ties of common interest are recognized. The wage of the toiler is made to go as far as possible. Saving, thrift, prudence are promoted. The Canal Zone government supply system must go with the canal construction population, but the lesson and the moral it teaches should, and doubtless will, be preserved. This lesson and this moral combine to emphasize the fact that it is possible through social organization to improve existing human conditions immensely.

A RED DANDELION is said to be the latest thing in plant development. The finding of useful employment for misdirected genius is likely to be one of the tasks society must assume in the future.

Some persons standardize their fellows according to their vocations. Others judge by avocations. Some persons labor so incessantly that they are made what they are by toil. On the other hand, for an increasing number of workers the world over, the safest test of their attainments as civilized beings is their use of leisure, of their exemption from bread-winning, of their spare time. This being so it becomes increasingly impor-

This being so, it becomes increasingly important that, where forced labor and conformity to routine are diminished, those so fortunate as to enjoy the escape from the treadmill shall at once find opportunities for wise use of the new time. Especially is this true with respect to groups of persons or strata of society never previously blessed with much leisure. Hence society today needs wise prophets for the masses who will show them what to do with the hours that formerly were full of labor. Hence communities not only must provide recreational centers but also gospellers and exemplars of the art of leisure use. As the ablest American student of municipal conditions at home and abroad has just said, "New York has turned the leisure life of its masses over to places which are interested in pecuniary profits. The great need of the city is a constructive leisure-time program, directed by public authorities and supported at public expense." What is true of New York is no less true of every other urban center with congested population, with its youth forced on the streets for exercise of social arts that were formerly cultivated in home parlors, and with a thousand and one selfish agencies busy bidding for the spare time and cash of the homeless but not workless wage-earners.

One may not go as far as F. C. Howe in advocacy of such municipal expenditure. But from some source, private or public, fundamental instruction in the fine art of using leisure must come to the rising generation, and provision be made for making it a cultural and uplifting force. Society can hardly spurn such a duty without regretting its remissness.

System, Not Men, at Fault

A WEIGHTY contribution to discussion of national needs in the way of governmental adjustments has just been made by Henry L. Stimson, a leader of the New York bar who was secretary of war in the last administration. As in so many contemporary arguments of the kind the crucial issue is seen to be redefinition of the relative power of executive and of Legislature. As for Mr. Stimson, he has no doubt of the imperative need of enhancing the authority of the executive. Organic law must formally authorize policies that recent executives have been forced by pressure of public opinion to adopt in dealing with legislative bodies. Presidents and Governors hereafter must be allowed to frame budgets. Administration measures must be given preference and right of way. Presidents and cabinet officers must have authority to press personally upon lawmakers the claims of bills back of which the executive department stands. In short, there must be a somewhat marked approach to the British system of a prime minister's power in shaping the legislative program.

If President Wilson has gone farther than his predecessor in using his opportunities to shape laws and influence legislators, Mr. Stimson, the progressive Republican, has no fault to find. Anything is better, he argues, than the present inept and inefficient system which enables executive and Legislature to work at odds when they should be allies. Just how it is to be arranged that President and Legislature always shall see eye to eye, and be of the same party. Mr. Stimson does not point out. But that he indorses the plan for formal, deliberate extension of executive authority, no doubt is due to his experiences in Washington and his study of the problem at first hand.

For humanists the most interesting part of his address to the Philadelphia law academy was his defense of the morality and patriotism of the average lawmaker. He is quite certain that they are higher than the average business man's. Legislative inefficiency, in his opinion, comes from a defective system of law making rather than from the lack of intellectual or ethical equipment on the part of the lawmakers.

Cleveland's

Euclid

Avenue

Books of reference that in this rapidly moving age have become antiquated before the newness is altogether worn from their bindings may, nevertheless, be consulted now and then for useful information. Thus, with regard to Cleveland, O., a city that within a generation was popularly associated with park-bordered avenues of great width, with parallel rows of stately trees, with the most ample lawns of any considerable community in the country, and that within two decades has become populous, noisy, smoky, and, of course, prosperous, may be read: "On account of its abundant foliage, Cleveland has won the name of Forest city," or this: "The dwellings of the city are seldom found in blocks, and tenements are rare," or this: "Euclid avenue is celebrated for its beauty and its handsome residences." For many years Euclid avenue ranked among the finest in the country, if not in the world. It is still a magnificent street. For that matter, Cleveland is still a beautiful city. The question is, How long will it remain so under present conditions?

Cleveland has been so intensely interested in the matter of growth, in the matter of business expansion, during the last two decades that it has had little time or disposition to think of its fading beauty. It seems to have become alarmed, however. Within the past few years it has succeeded in starting a civic center that is rapidly growing into a splendid civic ornament. Even when this work was taken in hand, however, the simpler and lovelier and more natural attractions of the city were still being neglected. Everything still continued to give right of way to business. Latterly, Euclid avenue, a substitute for which not all the money that might be made in Cleveland during the next hundred years could buy, has been threatened with invasion—has actually in part been invaded—and Cleveland has awakened to the menace of commercialism.

Better still, it would seem that this has been accompanied by some wholesome civic shame. Dr. Werner Hegeman, an eminent German expert on municipal management, who has been visiting Cleveland as well as other American cities, is directly responsible for its embarrassment, because he has taken pains to point out where it has been inexcusably indifferent and negligent in the matter of Wise Investment of Leisure taking care of itself. He has gone farther than merely to criticize and to condemn. He recommends that either the city assume stricter control over the character and location of business structures invading such districts as that of which Euclid avenue is the principal boulevard, or that property-owners organize for their own protection. Commenting on this, the Plain Dealer says: "By either method the attractiveness of Euclid avenue might yet be saved, though no time can be lost."

Time enough has been lost not only in Cleveland but in every one of the growing cities of the United States. They have been allowed to grow without direction, they are still, in most cases, growing without plan. Here is where all the trouble lies. Municipalities and property owners and civic populations generally should all unite for mutual protection against wanton commercial intrusion. The establishment of regulations and restrictions will hurt no legitimate business; even commercialism in its true sense will be given impetus if compelled to follow its own proper channels and to keep within its own proper limits.

The port directors of Boston, with commendable enterprise and audacity, last November committed the chief trading center and port of New England to a project of major proportions and unusual significance. They promised to provide for the largest type of marine craft wharfage facilities then lacking in the harbor; to have the Commonwealth pier ready by June 1st; and they committed themselves and the city to a definite alliance

Boston's Tie with Hamburg with the great Hamburg-American line, by which Boston would become one of its American terminals for passengers and freight. The pledge has been kept on both sides. The old Commonwealth pier has been transformed by ceaseless work night and day. It will be dedicated tomorrow. On Saturday the first of the German vessels will land her cargo and passengers, and for a season thereafter suitable festivities shared by representatives and guests of the ship company, by state and local officials, and by leading citizens will fitly recognize the importance of the event.

For this development is one of the first fruits of the renaissance of sectional pride and ambition among a people whose ships once traversed the Pacific as well as the Atlantic; it shows the alertness and executive power of the port directors when face to face with opportunity; and it tells of a very marked increase in the terminal facilities of a port much needing such enlargement. Moreover it heralds closer relations with German producers and consumers and a consequent lessening of the relative importance to New England of the trade with Great Britain. New York's superior facilities for shipments of provisions to Hamburg hitherto have worked against Boston's getting much of the large export trade of the West in these lines.

In the report just made to the port directors by an expert in transportation who has been studying why more of the export tonnage of the country, especially of the middle West, does not go out from Boston, he shows from the nature of the evidence available that the fault is twofold. Preferential rates to ports farther south prejudice shippers against Boston, and an insufficient variety of lines and routes await exporters once they have overcome other objections. With satisfaction, therefore, civic-spirited and publicminded men note the closer ties of Boston with the great commercial and shipping center of Germany.

Possibly the Frisco railway system may never emerge from its present difficulties with the form it possessed when it became overwhelmed by them, but to assume that the intrinsic value of the railroads constituting its 7500 miles of clear trackage can be permanently impaired by, any faults or changes in its management would be to deny a future to the territory it is intended to serve. Any one desirous of inquiring into the character and resources of that territory will be greatly helped by referring to a map or atlas of the great Southwest of the United States. That magnificent section is cobwebbed by lines of railroad subsidiary to the St. Louis & San Francisco organization, and these ramify Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Illinois, Kansas, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and Texas.

Why the system has fallen into difficulties is a short story. It is overloaded with bonded indebtedness, the accumulation of years, to the extent that its fixed charges have been calling for nearly 99 per cent of its net earnings. It assumed obligations beyond its earning ability. Owing to its tightened circumstances it has been compelled to pay dearly for accommodation. Although doing an immense business, the drain upon its income has been more than it could bear. It is passing through an experience that has come to some of the largest transportation systems of the United States in the past, and generally with good results. That is, they have been driven to the point of complete readjustment. This has often demanded great individual sacrifice. In the long run it has given solvency, stability and permanency to the enterprises concerned.

One thing must never be lost sight of in cases of this kind. Nine times out of ten the trouble is due to bad financiering rather than to poor business. The country behind the Frisco system is prosperous. Its business—the business in which the Frisco system shares—grows larger and larger year by year. Under a receivership the territory will undoubtedly be adequately served. There may be disintegration and reorganization of the system, but while this is in progress the trains of its constituent lines will be hauling great numbers of passengers and great quantities of freight, and even if there shall be a separation of these lines, there can be no separation of them from the commerce that the territory creates. By the same name or by some other, under the present or some other grouping, the railroads in the Frisco system will need only to care well for a great business in order to obtain it and to profit by it. The Frisco receivership affects Wall street a great deal more than it affects the

The change from "port" and "starboard" to "right" and "left" has survived one vigorous protest, but it will have to brace itself for others. A new generation must rise before it will seem quite natural to seamen.

FROM all appearances Congress will be in session long enough to take a Labor day recess.
